

Zoom Appoints Ryan Azus as Chief Revenue Officer

August 5, 2019

Communications Software Veteran To Lead Zoom's Sales, Customer Success, and Channel Teams

SAN JOSE, Calif., Aug. 05, 2019 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Zoom Video Communications, Inc. (NASDAQ: ZM) today announced that Ryan Azus has joined the company as its chief revenue officer, reporting to CEO Eric S. Yuan. Azus will be globally responsible for Zoom's direct salesforce, as well as its channel, sales operations and enablement, customer success, and sales engineering teams.

Azus joins Zoom after almost 20 years in the communications industry. He spent the past nine years at RingCentral, most recently as executive vice president of sales and services, where he was instrumental in building the company's multi-product, multi-channel field sales and channel organizations from the ground up, as well as growing the company's services organization. Prior to RingCentral, Azus was a sales leader at Cisco Webex for over nine years.

"What a thrill to come on board team Zoom!" said Azus. "Zoom's vision for the future of communication and collaboration, customer-focused culture, distinct brand, and world-class team have come together to create an incredible company. It's an exciting opportunity to use my expertise in building enterprise go-to-market programs to help Zoom continue to grow rapidly at scale."

"Ryan has an incredible acumen for building and leading world-class revenue organizations," added Yuan. "He will take Zoom to the next level and accelerate our growth. His expertise is unmatched and will be invaluable as we modernize unified communications with our video-first approach."
